BELGIUM Translation
October 13th, 1993
De Standaard - Daily

The most encouraging newspaper article of the most recent days is the purely scientific announcement that we need tobacco and alcohol to relax from all our efforts.
We donot know the British Professor Warburton but we are enclined to take him very serious. He was supported by a German colleague who added to the statement that these products form an antidote for our negative feelings.

The rest of the article tells a story about someone who apparently lives very healthy and in his spare time illegally removes ashtrays from public places.
It is a difficult part to translate, but what it wants to prove is that the scientific medical statement is a very bad statement.
